A Timeless Tale of Friendship and Love

George and Martha are two hippopotamuses who are best friends. They love to play together, go on adventures, and share their thoughts and feelings with each other. But even the best of friends have their disagreements. Sometimes George and Martha get mad at each other, but they always find a way to make up.

One day, George and Martha are playing in the forest when they come across a beautiful crown. They both want to wear the crown, but they can't agree on who should have it. They start to argue, and soon they are both very angry.

Just when it seems like their friendship is over, George has an idea. He suggests that they share the crown. They can each wear it for a little while, and then they can switch. Martha agrees, and they both put on the crown.

As soon as they put on the crown, they feel a strange sensation. They feel happy and loved, and they know that their friendship is stronger than ever. They realize that the crown is not just a symbol of power, but also a symbol of their friendship and love.

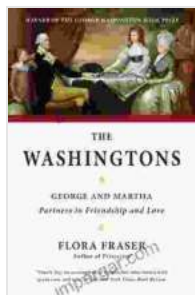

George and Martha continue to wear the crown together, and they always remember the lesson they learned that day. They know that friendship is more important than anything else, and that love is the most powerful force in the world.
