Land and Revolution in Iran 1960-1980: The Economic and Social Consequences of the Land Reform is a comprehensive study of the Iranian land reform of the 1960s and 1970s. The book examines the reform's impact on the Iranian economy, society, and politics.

The land reform was one of the most significant events in Iranian history. It resulted in the redistribution of land from large landowners to small farmers. The reform was designed to reduce inequality and promote economic development. However, it also had a number of negative consequences, including increased rural unemployment and environmental degradation.

Land and Revolution in Iran 1960-1980 is a detailed and well-researched account of the Iranian land reform. Abrahamian provides a wealth of data and analysis on the reform's economic, social, and political consequences. The book is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the history of Iran or in the study of land reform.
