1. I believe in you.

2. You can do it.
3. Thank you.
4. I'm sorry.
5. Let's do it.
6. I'm here for you.
7. I am committed to you.

Dr. Maxwell explores the science behind each word, delving into the neurological and psychological mechanisms that make them so effective.

1. I believe in you.

This phrase infuses your team members with confidence and self-belief. It sends a message that you trust their abilities and recognize their potential. It inspires them to aim higher and strive for excellence.

2. You can do it.

These words convey encouragement and support. They remind your team that you believe in their abilities and trust them to succeed. This can help them overcome self-doubt and persevere in the face of challenges.

3. Thank you.

Gratitude is a powerful motivator. When you express your appreciation for your team's contributions, it shows them that you value their work and recognize their efforts. This fosters loyalty, engagement, and a sense of belonging.

4. I'm sorry.

Taking responsibility for your mistakes is a sign of integrity and humility. When you apologize, you acknowledge your imperfections and show that you value relationships over ego. This can diffuse conflict, build trust, and strengthen bonds within your team.

5. Let's do it.

These words inspire action and collaboration. They create a sense of urgency and invite your team to join you on a journey. By using "we" instead of "I," you foster a sense of shared purpose and ownership.

6. I'm here for you.

This phrase communicates care and support. It shows your team that you are committed to their well-being and that they can rely on you in times of need. This can create a positive and supportive work environment where people feel valued and appreciated.

7. I am committed to you.

These words demonstrate your unwavering dedication to your team and the organization. They convey a sense of loyalty, purpose, and long-term vision. This can inspire trust, motivation, and a commitment to success from your team.
