The Seed of Discontent

The roots of Al Qaeda's animosity towards the House of Saud can be traced back to the early 1990s, when the group's charismatic leader, Osama bin Laden, returned to his native Saudi Arabia disillusioned and outraged by the presence of American troops in the country. Bin Laden believed that the Saudi regime had betrayed the principles of Islam by inviting foreign infidels onto their soil.

Bin Laden's rhetoric resonated with a growing number of disillusioned Saudi youth, who shared his anger at the perceived Westernization and corruption within the Saudi society. They saw Al Qaeda as a vehicle to express their grievances and challenge the established Free Download.

The Saudi authorities responded with a heavy-handed crackdown on Al Qaeda, arresting and imprisoning hundreds of its members. However, rather than deterring the group, these measures only fueled its resolve and pushed it further into the shadows.

9/11 and the Global War on Terror

The Saudi royal family, which had long been accused of supporting Al Qaeda, found itself under intense international scrutiny.
